 Area of Interest

Overview

ABOUT: The Biodiversity Report provides information on species occurrence and relative abundance within a user-defined Area of Interest. The species range maps used in this analysis were developed using the Ecosystem-based Automated Range (EBAR) mapping method; this method allows for the systematic documentation of the presence of a species within a particular ecosystem (called 'EcoRegion') organized using NWT Ecological Classification. Official species lists are from the NWT General Status Species Ranking Program. NOTES: (1) To be included in Table 1, a species must have a range map distribution code value > 0 within the Area of Interest (i.e., the species must be present). (2) Multiple distribution code values for an individual species may be listed in Table 1 as the relative abundance for a species may vary within the Area of Interest and across multiple EcoRegions. (3) Species Abundance Definitions: 0 - Absent/Extirpated (no evidence of presence; found elsewhere in the NWT; possible ecological barriers to use of range, or may be able to use range; may have been present in the past), 0.5 - Presence Expected (occurrence may not be confirmed, but is expected because of favourable ecological indicators and presence in adjacent ecoregions; may have been present in the past), 1 - Occasional (vagrant or extralimital individuals from a neighbouring or distant source population; able to use range, but apparently unable to establish viable populations; may have ability to disperse far into poor habitats), 2 - Rare (sparse or sporadic populations persist; for sedentary or thinly distributed species, densities low or suboptimal; for nomadic species, alternating presence/absence), 3 - Localized/Transient - Space component - Localised in some habitats (metapopulation usually comprised of subpopulations restricted to a few habitats or enclaves; sedentary species may be scattered or patchy; colonies may be isolated or disjunct), 3 - Localized/Transient - Time component - Transient in seasons or timing (subpopulations may fluctuate between rare and common or abundant according to food supply; species that occupy large home ranges and move or migrate seasonally so that they may be transient and use of an area is highly variable), 4 - Common (occur in most of the ecoregion; may be widespread but dispersed unevenly across diverse habitats; may also be concentrated mainly in a few of the larger or most common habitat types), 5 - Abundant (high populations widespread across the entire ecoregion; usually able to occupy most of the larger habitats or a diversity of habitat types).
